Message from the AOGD Office

Dear AOGD members

Year 2014 -15 as an office bearer has been a great year as far as achieving our targets were concerned. We thank one and all for your support on signing out from the office. We would like to thank our patrons Dr S N Mukherjee, Dr Urmil Sharma, Dr S K Bhandari, Dr Sheila Mehra and Dr Kamal Buckshee for their guidance and blessings. We would like to thank our Ex Officio executive past presidents Dr Neera Agarwal, Dr Maya Sood, Dr Sudha Salhan, Dr Swaraj Batra, Dr Neelam Bala Vaid, Dr S S Trivedi , Dr Suneeta Mittal, Dr Indrani Ganguli, Dr Shashi Prateek, Dr Usha Manaktala, Dr Neerja Goel, Dr Chitra Raghunandan, Dr Alka Kriplani for their active participation and interest in the activities, participating in the executive committee meetings, conference and monthly clinical meetings. Our Judges for monthly clinical presentations Dr Urmil Sharma, Dr S K Ghai Bhandari, Dr S S Trivedi and Dr Chitra Raghunandan need an applause for taking time out for regularly attending most of the monthly clinical meeting and providing a fair ground for uniform judgment of the best clinical presentation.

We would like to thank our Vice president Dr Sanjivni Khanna for her continuous support and active leadership in the role of vice president, endoscopy committee chairperson and clinical meeting incharge. Dr Manvita Mahajan and Dr Priyata Lal our treasurer worked very hard in managing the AOGD funds. Dr Sharda Jain has been the backbone of the AOGD as a medicolegal issues incharge and obstetric drill incharge and we thank her for always being there and giving her wholehearted honest advice. We would like to thank Dr Shashi Prateek who has worked quietly and tirelessly for cervical cancer prevention programme, Dr Nirmala Agarwal, Dr Anjila Aneja and Dr Ritambhra Agarwal for making the clinical meeting a huge success.

We would also like to thank all our AOGD Executive Council Members Dr Dipika Deka from AIIMS, Dr Shakti B Khanna from Apollo Hospital, Dr Dinesh Kansal from BL Kapoor Hospital, Dr Reeta Ranjan from DDU Dr Sangeeta Gupta from ESI, Basaidarapur, Dr Gouri Devi from Gouri Hospital, Dr Mamta Gupta from Hindu Rao Hospital, Dr Sonia Malik from Holy Angel, Dr Abha Singh from LHMC, Dr Sabhyata Gupta from Medanta Mediclinic, Dr S N Basu from Max Hospitals, Dr Sudha Prasad from MAMC, Dr Sharda Jain from Pushpanjali Hospital, Dr Pushpa Singh from RML Hospital, Dr Indrani Ganguli from SGRH, Dr Nirmala Agarwal from Sant Parmanand, Dr Pratima Mittal from Safdarjung Hospital, Dr Renu Mishra from Sita Ram Bhartiya and Dr Shalini Rajaram from UCMS for being active executive members.

We would like to thank all our AOGD Subcommittee chairpersons for their contributions in carrying forward the AOGD activities. Special thanks to Dr Ramesh Sarin, Breast cancer prevention subcommittee chairperson for arranging public forum and the memorable inauguration in the AOGD conference with the memorizing musical show "Black and white". We would like to thank Dr Sushila Gupta, Adolescent health subcommittee chairperson for working hard through out the year and bringing new lights to the adolescent health. Special thanks to Dr Kusum Chopra, rural health subcommittee chairperson who has worked quietly with dedication and has brought newer heights to this subcommittee. Dr Anita Kaul was the backbone of our inauguration function in the conference and the post conference workshop and we would like to thank her for her contribution to the fetal medicine committee. We would like to thank Dr Neeta Singh, Dr Kuldeep Jain, Dr Kanika Gupta, Dr Nutan Agarwal, Dr Manju Khimani, Dr JB Sharma, Dr Sohani Verma, Dr Shashi Prateek and Dr Sangeeta Gupta for their active contribution through out the year.

AOGD Bulletin

This is our last issue of the AOGD bulletin. We got overwhelming response from our AOGD members. The range of topics, the unique perspectives, and the persuasive writing evidenced in these articles is a testament to the work that the Delhiites are producing. It is also indicative of the effort and dedication put in by the editors.

It has been our honour and pleasure to help encourage the academic discourse among our members, and for us to have the opportunity to read so many insightful articles from these impressive authors. We hope you enjoyed and learnt from our bulletin, and found it a source of up-to-date and high-quality serve of regular information in the Obs and Gynae field.

We want to thank our readers in Delhi & other parts of the country. It has been a stimulating, challenging, and rewarding ride with, a lot of fun for all of us. We would like to thank our co editors Dr Jharna Behura for bringing out the Journal scan and succinct updates and Dr Surveen Ghuman for her expert editor's comment in the monthly clinical case presentations. Proceedings of the multidisciplinary team meetings by Dr Sohani Verma were well appreciated and were a very exciting new initiatives.

Our admiration and respect for all the authors and the editorial board are limitless, and it has been an honor and a privilege to lead them. Eternal thanks to Dr Ramandeep Kaur for efficiently managing the activities held under the AOGD and sending it for the bulletin and gratitude beyond measure to Dr Ritambhara for providing the abstracts of the clinical case meeting on time. Himanshu our AOGD secretary worked very hard in stamping and posting of the bulletins with his gang.

We are sure that Safdarjung hospital will take this bulletin to greater heights and will bring more progress and achievements to our organization. We hope they can get it peer review and indexed

Thank you all for giving us this wonderful experience of serving as office bearers of this prestigious association.

Thanks and regards

Dr Urvashi Prasad Jha

Dr Neema Sharma

OBSTETRIC

Genetics in obstetric practice

Seema Thakur
Fortis Hospitals, Delhi- NCR

There has been remarkable progress in the field of medical genetics in the last decade. The role of genetic testing to guide medical decision making is increasing. Most of the genetic disorders are still not treatable and hence prenatal diagnosis and genetic counselling is the only option available. The concept of fetus as a patient was recognized about 40 years ago. Since then there has been improvements in the diagnostic imaging, genetic testing and the skill of the obstetricians.

Genetic evaluations within reproductive medicine may be subdivided into 4 main categories:¹

1. Preconception genetic testing: The genetic evaluation of prospective parents before pregnancy
2. Antenatal genetic testing: The genetic evaluation of women who are currently pregnant to determine the fetal disorders
3. Preimplantation genetic testing: The genetic evaluation of an embryo, before uterine transfer, via an embryo biopsy during an in vitro fertilization (IVF) procedure
4. Genetic analysis following fetal demise or fetal malformation: The genetic evaluation of the products of conception following a failed pregnancy

An obstetrician in the present day practice needs to understand the basic genetics, cytogenetics, molecular genetics and genetic counselling. In this article, I would discuss these issues which an obstetrician faces in a day to day practice.

Indications of genetic counselling are shown in Table 1. About two thirds of genetic consultations are related to pregnancy.

Table 1: Indications of genetic counseling in obstetric practice

Pregnant	Non pregnant
Positive screening for Down syndrome	Recurrent abortions
Advanced maternal age	Hereditary Cancer e.g. Breast cancer, Ovarian Cancer
Previous child with aneuploidy	Chromosomal diseases e.g. Balanced translocation carrier, Down syndrome, Trisomy X
Couple with abnormal Hemoglobins on HPLC	Primary amenorrhoea
Soft markers on ultrasound	Male Infertility
Fetal malformations on Ultrasound	Ambiguous genitalia
Previous child with Congenital malformations
Previous child with mental retardation
Fetal autopsy

Preconception genetic testing

Preconception genetic testing is the genetic evaluation of prospective parents before pregnancy. Many individuals have a specific family history of certain genetic disorders, but many may also be at risk for unknown genetic diseases. Preconception genetic testing can be based on a couple's ethnicity or the medical history of a genetic disease segregating in their families. Common conditions currently tested in a preconception genetic evaluation based on ethnicity include hemoglobinopathies (thalassemia trait, haemoglobin E, sickle cell trait), Cystic fibrosis, Tay-Sachs disease, Gaucher disease, and spinal muscular atrophy

Prenatal genetic testing

A central focus of obstetric care for many years has been to identify fetal disorders during pregnancy.

The women seeking the prenatal diagnosis are basically can be subdivided into two groups: High risk and low risk based upon family history. Women with high risk are already having a previous affected child or a family member affected with the physical or mental handicap. A low risk woman has been offered prenatal diagnosis after the results of prenatal screening tests done during pregnancy. Table 2 shows indications of first 100 cases for prenatal diagnosis at Department of Genetics and Fetal Medicine at Fortis Hospital. Positive biochemical screen is most common reason followed by advanced maternal age. Counseling for ultrasound detected soft markers and fetal malformations accounted for 14/100

Genetic disorders are broadly categorised into three types

1. Chromosomal disorders e.g. Down syndrome
2. Single gene disorders e.g. Thalassemia
3. Multifactorial- e.g. diabetes mellitus where both genes and environment play a role in disease causation.

Table 2: Indications of prenatal diagnosis at Fortis hospital, n=100

Positive double/ triple test	40
Previous Down syndrome	9
Advanced maternal age	18

Previous dev. delay	3
Family history of Duchenne muscular dystrophy
Previous CAH	1
Previous hyperinsulinism	1
Balanced translocation in mother	1
Prev Spondyloarthropathy	1

Down syndrome is the commonest genetic cause of mental retardation. Incidence of Down syndrome is 1 in 800 in general population. The incidence of the disease increases with advancing maternal age. Screening for Down syndrome by first trimester and second trimester biochemical screening and ultrasound is possible. NIFTY is a very promising test and may become routine in near future and have a potential to change the obstetric practice remarkably. Other chromosomal disorders which can be screened in biochemical screening are trisomy 18 and 13.

Thalassemia is a single gene disorder which causes ineffective blood formation and hence for survival child depends upon repeated blood transfusions. An obstetrician has a crucial role in thalassemia prevention. A person is a thalassemia trait when MCV <75 f/l, MCH <25 f/l, MCHC <25 f/l and HbA2 >3.5%.

A number of fetal malformations that can be detected by USG are associated with chromosomal abnormality. They can be soft markers or congenital malformations. Soft markers include increased nuchal thickening, absent nasal bone, echogenic focus in the heart, echogenic bowel, pelvic dilatation and aberrant right subclavian artery. In the case of most isolated markers there is only a small effect on modifying the pre-test odds for trisomy 21, but with ventriculomegaly, nuchal fold thickness and ARSA there is a 3–4-fold increase in risk and with hypoplastic nasal bone a 6–7-fold increase.²

When fetal malformations are detected on USG, the couple needs adequate information regarding the malformation, its prognosis, and availability of surgical treatment and recurrence risk for next pregnancy. Based upon this information, the family will take decision to terminate or continue the pregnancy. Malformations can be lethal, semilethal or the prognosis can be uncertain. In many malformations, a definite prognosis can not be predicted. Detection of malformation with uncertain prognosis poses a significant dilemma for treating physician as well as patients. Whenever any malformation is diagnosed on ultrasound,

- Associated malformations should be searched carefully. A knowledge of syndromic associations will help. Presence of IUGR/ Overgrowth or amniotic fluid – polyhydramnios or oligohydramnios should be checked
- Fetal Echocardiography to look for any associated cardiac abnormality
- Chromosomal and or microarray CGH analysis of fetus should be done

All this information is important for delineating the prognosis by which a reproductive decision can be taken.

Fetal autopsy and genetic testing

Fetal autopsy is important in cases where fetal malformation has been diagnosed on USG and in cases of IUD. The indication of fetal autopsy at our department in the last 5 years include IUD (30/63), fetal malformations (27/63), and infections (3/63).

SNP microarrays has become an important component of the evaluation of products of conception and are being used in practice.

Preimplantation genetic testing

Preimplantation genetic diagnosis (PGD) is an alternative to prenatal diagnosis and is applicable to couples who are at risk of genetic disease in the offspring and want to avoid the risk of pregnancy termination. PGD involves the diagnosis of a genetic disorder in embryos obtained by in vitro fertilization (IVF), selection of healthy embryos, and transferring them to the mother's uterus.

PGS (Preimplantation genetic screening) is screening of embryo for aneuploidy before implantation. Traditionally, this was done by FISH but now SNP array is being increasingly used. PGS has been shown to improve the pregnancy rate.

Conclusions

Utility of genetic counseling in the obstetric practice is rising due to recent scientific advances in medical genetics and prenatal diagnostic technologies.

Management of suspected/benign ovarian masses

Nirja Chawla

Gynae Endoscopy Centre, Bay Shoppe 385, Sector 44 D, Chandigarh

Introduction

Ovarian masses may be cysts – simple or complex, solid or mixed/complex masses; benign, borderline or malignant. Evidence based guidelines for the initial assessment and management of ovarian masses are available with the National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE),¹ the American College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (ACOG),² Society of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists of Canada (SOGC)³ and the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (RCOG).⁴ This particular review deals with the diagnosis and initial management of benign and suspected, not borderline or malignant ovarian masses.

The presence of an ovarian mass invariably causes alarm as some grey shadows of the mind even though we know that not all ovarian masses are malignant. This fear arises because ovarian cancer is a 'silent killer' and two-thirds die of the disease within 5 years. Even though ovarian cancer is the 5th most common cancer among women in UK, it is the leading cause of death from gynaecological cancers. Ovarian malignancy requires laparotomy and extensive surgery but this would be highly inappropriate for all suspected and benign ovarian masses. The idea is to be able to proceed with initial diagnosis and management of the detected ovarian mass in a scientific, evidence based manner, the target being to identify those who can be managed within a 'benign' gynaecological service and when referral into a gynaecological service should occur. The two most important questions pertinent to overall survival are – what is the most appropriate management and where. Cases at low risk of malignancy can be managed by the general gynaecologist; intermediate risk patients triaged to a cancer unit and high risk patients to a cancer centre.⁵ Mean survival of ovarian cancer is improved significantly when managed in a gynaecological oncology specialized service⁶

The general approach to ovarian masses by age: pre- and postmenopausal women (PreMW and PMW) is similar, yet there are differences in the diagnosis and management that all clinicians should be aware about. Knowledge of a few facts in this regard is helpful. The lifetime risk of being diagnosed with ovarian cancer is 1 in 48. 90% of ovarian cancers occur in women more than 45 years of age; the highest incidence is in the PMW; and among them it is highest in the ages of 60-65 years. Of the primary ovarian tumours 75% are benign. The possibility of a tumour being malignant in the PreMW is 1 in 1000 but in PMW it is three times more. An ovarian mass in the PreMW is thus most likely to be benign. Ovarian cysts are common in PMW, though less than in PreMW. Abnormal ovarian morphology was found in 21.2% among 20,000 healthy PMW.⁷ Before ultrasound was routinely available, a palpable ovary or a pelvic mass in PMW was an indication for surgery. However, since they are common, many with low risk of malignancy exploratory laparotomy may not always be required.

History and examination

In all women with suspected ovarian masses, a history detailing the risk factors and protective factors as well as a family history of ovarian/breast-male and female/colon/prostate cancer must be taken. Older women are more likely to have malignant masses. Pregnancy and oral contraceptives are protective whereas assisted reproductive technologies are implicated though not proven to be associated with increased risk. Endometriosis and PCOS have also been linked with ovarian cancer. Many ovarian cancers are hereditary and 3 main hereditary types have been identified – ovarian cancer alone; ovarian and breast cancer; and ovarian and colon cancer. The most important risk factor for ovarian cancer is family history of ovarian cancer in a first degree relative (mother, daughter, sister).

Whenever a woman presents with an ovarian mass, consider symptoms suggestive of ovarian malignancy.⁸ Women with ovarian cancer experience some symptoms more frequently, more severely and more persistently than women who do not have the disease. Post menopausal bleeding is an important complaint which must be investigated. There is a complete algorithm devoted to the workup of postmenopausal bleeding and ovarian cancer investigation is part of it. The Guideline Development Group has therefore not included this, although it should be investigated, in the following alert symptoms for ovarian cancer: persistent abdominal distension (bloating); feeling full (early satiety); pelvic or abdominal pain; increased urinary frequency, urgency or a woman of 50 years age or more with symptoms diagnosed as Irritable Bowel syndrome. These symptoms present within last 12 months and persisting or frequent more than 12 times in one month, especially if woman is 50 years of age or more, suggest an investigation for ovarian cancer. Enquire also for symptoms not specific to ovarian cancer: unexplained weight loss, changes in bowel habits and fatigue.⁹ On examination look for presence or absence of local lymphadenopathy. In case of acute presentation with pain, consider torsion, rupture or haemorrhage in ovarian cyst. Clinical examination has poor sensitivity in detection of ovarian masses (15-51%) but its importance lies in evaluation of mass tenderness, mobility, nodularity and ascites.¹⁰

Tumour markers

The next step would be to get laboratory analysis of tumour Markers. More than 90% of malignant ovarian tumours are surface epithelial tumours. Among the tumour markers, CEA, CDX2, CA72-4, CA19-9 are less sensitive than CA125 and not recommended for routine use. HE4 is more sensitive and specific than CA125 but the data is much more for CA125^{11,12}. Combination of CA125 and HE4 is more specific but less sensitive than either marker in isolation¹³. Currently the role of CA125 alone for routine use is well established; raised in over 80% of epithelial ovarian cancer cases and, if a cut-off of 30 u/ml is used, the test has a sensitivity and specificity of 81% and 75% respectively¹⁴. It is mandatory to assay CA125 in PMW but not so in PreMW in cases of simple ovarian cyst.¹⁵ Nevertheless in PreMW values above 200 u/ml or serially rising values warrant discussion with a gynaecological oncologist. Static elevated CA125 may have many benign differential diagnosis like fibroids, adenomyosis, endometriosis and pelvic infections. CA125 is primarily a marker for epithelial ovarian tumours¹⁶. All women less than 40 years with a complex ovarian mass must have measurement of CA125 and Lactate Dehydrogenase (LDH), α -Fetoprotein (α -FP) and hCG because of the possibility of germ cell tumours.^{2,3}

Imaging

Ultrasound is the single most effective way of evaluating ovarian masses; transvaginal ultrasound (TVS) being the preferred route over abdominal (TAS) due to increased sensitivity unless the tumour extends outside the pelvic cavity or for assessment of extra-ovarian disease, when TVS may be combined with TAS. All women with ovarian masses must be offered an ultrasound in addition to CA125 as a primary step. 'Pattern recognition' of specific ultrasound findings has high sensitivity and specificity^{17,18}, with potential to reduce the number of unnecessary staging laparotomies¹⁹. Ultrasound achieves a sensitivity of 83% and specificity of 73% when using a morphology index²⁰. Colour flow mapping or 3D imaging may not improve diagnostic accuracy but increases sensitivity in complex cases in PreMW^{21,22}. However, in PMW, there is no clear role of routine doppler in assessing ovarian cysts since a small decrease in false-positive was offset by a greater drop in sensitivity²³. PreMW women may also benefit from a repeat ultrasound in the post menstrual phase in cases of doubt and for endometrial thickness in suspected estrogen-secreting tumours of the ovary.

There are certain conditions in which a good ultrasound can lead to a diagnosis with sufficient strength that further treatment can be done on basis of it. Some of these are haemorrhagic ovarian cyst, dermoid and endometriosis.

As far as other imaging modalities are concerned, none of them – MRI, CT or PET have a role for routine detection or evaluation of ovarian masses. In apparently benign disease, there is no need for further imaging other than ultrasound except in evaluation of complex cases. MRI may be superior to ultrasound and CT for diagnosing an ovarian mass but ultrasound may be slightly better than the others in differentiating between benign and malignant at the cost of some specificity^{24,25}. Combining all techniques may have some advantage but is not recommended routinely because of expense, limited availability and potential delay in referral and surgery²⁶. They may, however, have a place in more complex cases.

Risk of malignancy, triaging

In case malignant disease is a possibility, the best outcome is obtained by quick referral to a gynaecological oncology centre. For this triaging to be possible it is best to calculate the risk of malignancy. Of many models used to determine this risk, Jacob's Risk of Malignancy Index 1 and 2 (RMI 1 and RMI 2) has been sufficiently validated in PMW^{27,28}. However, RMI is not for use in PreMW because CA125 is of doubtful value and poor specificity in this sub-group. In PreMW, therefore, a specific model of ultrasound parameters, the ultrasound 'rules' derived from the International Ovarian Tumour Analysis (IOTA) group has been found to have increased sensitivity and specificity. These rules have been extensively validated in 1983 women from 19 ultrasound centres in 8 countries.

RMI 1 is simple to calculate using the formula: $RMI = U \times M \times CA125$

U = pre-surgical ultrasound score (1 for each of these – multilocular cysts, solid areas, metastasis, ascites, bilateral lesions. $U = 0$ for ultrasound score of 0; $U = 1$ for ultrasound score of 1; $U = 2$ for ultrasound score of 2-5).

M = menopausal status ($M = 1$ for PreMW; $M = 3$ for PMW).

CA125 pre-surgical level in u/ml.

Using cut-off point as 250, all 3 RMI 1, 2 & 3 have similar sensitivity of 70% and specificity of 90%.^{28,29}

The IOTA Group identifies simple ultrasound 'rules' in order to estimate accurately the risk of malignancy without using CA125; therefore of use in PreMW^{30,31}. These 'rules' classify masses as benign (B-rules) or malignant (M-rules).³²

B-rules: Unilocular cysts; Presence of solid components where the largest component is < 7 mm; Presence of acoustic shadowing; Smooth multilocular tumour with largest diameter < 100 mm; No blood flow.

M-rules: Irregular solid tumour; Ascites; At least 4 papillary structures; Irregular multilocular solid tumour with largest diameter > or = 100 mm; Very strong blood flow.

Women with an ovarian mass and any of the M-rules should be referred to a gynaecological oncology service. The reported sensitivity of the IOTA group 'rules' is 95% and specificity is 91%.³³

It should be appreciated, however, that none of the current tests are perfect with 100% sensitivity and specificity. CA125 levels, although raised in over 80% of ovarian cancers, is raised in only 50% of Stage 1 cases. It may also be raised in other benign conditions. Ultrasound often fails to differentiate between benign and malignant lesions.

Once the RMI is calculated, the women with ovarian masses can be triaged to Low Risk (RMI < 25), Moderate Risk (RMI 25-250) or High Risk (RMI > 250). The risk of cancer in these is estimated to be < 3%, 20% and 75% and they should be managed in a gynaecological unit, cancer unit or cancer centre respectively.³⁴ Women with low risk of malignancy need to be further triaged where risk of malignancy is sufficiently low to allow conservative management and those who still require intervention in some form.

Conservative management

Post-menopausal women with an ovarian mass falling in the low risk group can be managed in a gynaecology unit. If the cysts are Simple, less than 5 cms in diameter, with CA125 level < 30 IU/ml, they can be managed conservatively. Risk of malignancy in cysts < 50 mm, unilateral, unilocular and echo-free (Simple Cysts) is <1%³⁵. More than 50% will resolve spontaneously within 3 months³⁶. Conservative management entails that you repeat ultrasound scans and CA125 measurements every 4 months for one year. All those who do not fit into the criteria for simple cysts in PMW should be offered surgical management.

Younger, premenopausal women with asymptomatic simple ovarian cysts < 50 mm diameter, in non-emergent situations like pain, do not require follow up since these cysts are most likely physiological and resolve within 3 menstrual cycles³⁷. There is no evidence that oral contraceptive use can promote the resolution of functional ovarian cysts³⁸. Those with cysts between 50-70 mm in diameter should have yearly ultrasound follow up and those larger than 70 mm should be considered either for further imaging (MRI) or surgical intervention due to difficulties in examining the entire cyst adequately at time of ultrasound³⁹. Ovarian cysts that persist or increase in size after several cycles in PreMW are unlikely to be functional and need surgical intervention.

Surgery

Surgical management needs to be appropriate and according to the estimated risk of malignancy, by RMI or IOTA Group, by the most suitable surgeon and in appropriate location for the best outcome. There is no evidence based consensus on the size of ovarian cysts in PreMW above which surgery should be considered. Most studies, however, have used an arbitrary figure of > 50-60 mm as an indication for surgery⁴⁰.

Aspiration of cysts

Clear evidence based guidelines are available for various surgical techniques. In PreMW, ultrasound guided needle aspiration of cysts had similar resolution rates as expectant management (44.6% versus 46% respectively)⁴¹. Recurrence rates after laparoscopic needle aspiration were as high as 53-84%⁴². Transvaginal or laparoscopic aspiration may be an appropriate management in selected cases only among PreMW, after discussion with patient⁴³. However, in PMW, aspiration of ovarian cysts is not recommended. This is because cytological examination of cyst fluid is poor at distinguishing between benign and malignant tumours (sensitivity 25%) and the risk of cyst rupture is real, with unfavourable impact on disease survival.^{44,45}

Laparoscopy

In PreMW with ovarian masses > 50 mm, presumed to be benign, laparoscopic approach has many advantages. It is the 'gold standard' and is preferred over laparotomy^{46,47}. However, if there are large masses with solid areas e.g. dermoid cysts, laparotomy may be more appropriate although the size above which laparotomy should be considered is controversial. If size of the cyst is more than 70 mm the chances of rupture are higher at laparoscopy. Case reports of laparoscopic management of even giant tumours are available⁴⁸, but there is insufficient evidence to recommend this.⁴⁸

Since preoperative and intraoperative assessment cannot always preclude malignancy, spillage of contents should be avoided and consider usage of tissue retrieval bags. Chemical peritonitis following spillage from dermoid cyst is as low as 0.2% cases⁴⁹. In case it does occur meticulous lavage using warm saline should be done, not cold lavage which can cause hypothermia and solidification of fat-rich contents. Endometriomas greater than 30 mm mandate a histological diagnosis to rule out the rare malignancy¹. This will necessitate spillage, but it has been found to be uncommon and any consequent upstaging is considered inevitable.

In managing ovarian cysts in PMW the main idea is to exclude malignancy and RMI is used to triage the patient. Even though laparoscopic management for benign ovarian disease is well established in the PreMW, in PMW it should be restricted to those women who are not fit for expectant management yet their risk of malignancy is relatively low. This should be done in a cancer unit. The guidelines further mandate that laparoscopic management for PMW at moderate risk of malignancy must be oopherectomy (usually bilateral) rather than cystectomy and that too intact in a tissue retrieval bag.

Laparotomy

In PMW if the RMI indicates high risk for malignancy or if malignancy is revealed during laparoscopy or subsequent histology this warrants a laparotomy and total abdominal hysterectomy, bilateral salpingo-oophorectomy and full staging procedure which includes cytology from ascites or peritoneal washings, biopsies from adhesions and suspicious areas and infra-colic omentectomy with/without bilateral selective pelvic and para-aortic lymphadenectomy. This is best carried out in a cancer centre.⁵⁰

Androgen insensitivity syndrome

News

An Indian athlete won a silver medal in the women's 800m race at the 2006 Asian Games. She underwent a sex test shortly afterwards, and the results indicated that she "does not possess the sexual characteristics of a woman", and she was stripped of her silver medal. It was reported that she might have been born with Androgen insensitivity syndrome (AIS). She was told that she can't do sports anymore. She returned to her village in humiliation and fell into serious depression. Months later, she tried to kill herself. According to her "Everyone was looking at me in this new way: Is she a man? Is she a transvestite? It's very hurtful. It ruined my life and my family's life". So dealing with this complex situation needed intensive evaluation by a gynecologist, a geneticist, an endocrinologist, a psychologist, and an internal medicine specialist.

Definition

Androgen insensitivity syndrome (AIS) is a condition that results in the partial or complete inability of the cells to respond to androgens^{1,2,3}. The unresponsiveness of the cell to the presence of androgenic hormones can impair the masculinisation of the male genitalia in the developing fetus, as well as the development of male secondary sexual characteristics at puberty, but does not impair female genital or sexual development^{3,4}.

The androgen receptor mediates the effects of the androgens in the human body. Androgen insensitivity syndrome results when the functions of the androgen receptor (AR) is disturbed. The insensitivity to androgens is clinically significant only when it occurs in genetic males (i.e. individuals with a Y-chromosome). The clinical phenotypes in these conditions range from a normal male with mild spermatogenic defect, or reduced secondary terminal hair, to a full female, despite the presence of a Y-chromosome.

Androgen insensitivity syndrome is divided into three varieties which can be differentiated by the degree of genital masculinisation:

1. The complete androgen insensitivity syndrome when the external genitalia are that of a normal female.
2. The partial androgen insensitivity syndrome when the ext. genitalia are partially, masculinized.
3. The mild androgen insensitivity syndrome when the external genitalia are that of a normal male.

Individuals with a 46 XY karyotype will always express the mutant gene since they have only one X chromosome, whereas 46, XX carriers will be minimally affected. About 30% of the time, the AR mutation is a spontaneous result, and is not inherited⁵.

Androgen insensitivity syndrome results in the phenotype of prenatal undervirilization of external genitalia in males despite XY chromosomes, absence of pubic and axillary hair, lack of acne, absence of voice changes at puberty.

Depending on the mutation, a person with a (46-XY karyotype) and AIS can have either a male or female phenotype or may have genitalia that is only partially masculinised⁶. The gonads are testes regardless of phenotype due to the influence of the Y-chromosome^{7,8}. A 46XY female thus does not have ovaries or a uterus and can neither contribute an egg towards conception nor gestate a child.

Incidence

The incidence of androgen insensitivity syndrome is 1 case per 20,400 live born males⁹. In contrast to medical morbidity, psychological morbidity is common. Phenotypic females who are discovered to be genetic males may have psychosocial problems. These females require sensitive psychological support. Many of these patients have been told that they really are not women but actually are men because of the presence of a Y chromosome and testes.

Mortality and morbidity

Over time, untreated patients have a theoretical risk of malignant degeneration and development of gonadoblastoma of the testes. The risk ranges from 0-22% in adults with complete androgen insensitivity syndrome¹⁰.

History

Most cases of androgen insensitivity syndrome (AIS) are identified in the newborn period by the presence of inguinal masses, which later are identified as testes during surgery. Some patients are first seen in the teenage years for evaluation of primary amenorrhea. Gynecomastia is post-pubertal and men often do not have to shave daily.

Complete AIS

The "complete" form indicates that there is no androgen response; therefore, normal external female development occurs, and these infants should be reared as females. The testes (azoospermic with hyperplastic Leydig cells) can be present in the inguinal canals. There is no virilization at puberty because of the lack of androgen response. In contrast to dysgenetic gonads with a Y chromosome, the occurrence of gonadal tumors in AIS is relatively late, rarely before age 25, the overall incidence is less about 5-10%^{11,12,13,14}.

Therefore, gonadectomy should ideally be performed at approximately age 16-18, to allow endogenous hormonal changes and a smooth transition through puberty. Since prophylactic gonadectomy has to be done the detection of this syndrome demands careful investigation for other family members. As it is an X-linked recessive pattern of inheritance, Apparent sisters of affected individuals have a 1 in 3 chance of being XY. Female offspring of a normal sister of an affected individual have a 1 in 6 chance of being XY.

In the past it was thought that it was needless to disclose the gonadal and chromosomal sex to a patient with complete androgen insensitivity syndrome. Although infertile, these patients are certainly completely female in their gender identity. A high percentage of women with androgen insensitivity experience sexual problems¹⁵.

Incomplete androgen insensitivity

It is a spectrum of disorder, all due to an X-linked recessive trait. Incomplete androgen insensitivity is one-tenth as common as the complete, syndrome. The clinical presentation ranges from almost complete failure of virilization to essentially complete phenotypic masculinization:

Between these two poles exist examples of mild clitoromegaly and slight labial fusion to significant genital ambiguity. The term Reifenstein syndrome is now applied to all the intermediate forms that were initially given individual names (such as Lubs Syndrome) etc.

The male with androgen insensitivity have azoospermia or have severe oligospermic infertility. Indeed, the incidence may be 40 or more of men with infertility due to azoospermia or severe oligospermia.

However, the defect in androgen receptor function may be so subtle that some affected men are fertile¹⁶ and undervirilized.

Molecular analysis of the androgen receptor gene, has demonstrated a spectrum of disorders in which both the complete and partial forms result from androgen receptor gene mutations¹⁷. The gene encoding the androgen receptor is localized to the q 11-12 region (the long arm) of the X chromosome. About 400 unique mutations have been identified¹⁸. Two types of defective androgen receptor function are recognized: abnormalities of androgen binding and abnormalities of DNA binding.

Some men with partial androgen insensitivity can respond to androgen treatment. For eg. a person with Reifenstein syndrome due to a mutation in the DNA-binding domain of the androgen receptor may respond to high-dose testosterone administration with normal virilization¹⁹. An infant with ambiguous genitalia may respond to topical treatment with dihydrotestosterone, and normal genitalia may be restored²⁰. However, there is no test or measurement that will predict response, and only a few of these patients are able to respond to androgen therapy in the long run.

Sometimes the sex assignment can be a problem when ambiguous genitalia exist because of a partial response of the receptor. If sex assignment is female, early gonadectomy is performed to avoid neoplasia. In Reifenstein syndrome, the phallus may be large enough to allow a male sex assignment at birth, despite the perineal hypospadias.

The receptor function is inadequate to respond to the surge of androgen at puberty as a result; without androgen effect, estrogen activity prevails, and feminization with gynecomastia occurs. So the individuals are infertile and cannot react to exogenous androgen. But the karyotype is male XY, distinguishing it from feminizing syndromes of puberty in phenotypic males (e.g., Klinefelter syndrome).

The endocrine profiles of both the complete and incomplete forms are similar: i.e. normal to elevated levels of FSH, mildly elevated LH (due to absence of negative androgen feedback), and high blood levels testosterone and estradiol (due to increased testicular response to LH and increased peripheral conversion of testosterone to estradiol).

Differential diagnoses²¹

Mayer-Rokitansky Syndrome, Swyer's Syndrome,

1. 17,20-lyase deficiency
2. 17-Hydroxylase Deficiency syndrome
3. 17beta-hydroxysteroid dehydrogenase deficiency type 3
4. 3-Beta-Hydroxysteroid Dehydrogenase Deficiency
5. 5-Alpha-Reductase Deficiency
6. Congenital AdrenalHyperplasia
7. Denys-Drash syndrome
8. Frasier syndrome
9. Klinefelter syndrome
10. Mayer-Rokitansky Syndrome
11. Mutations in SRY, NR5A1, WT1
12. Mutations in the luteinizing hormone receptor
13. p450 oxidoreductase deficiency
14. Smith-Lemli-Opitz syndrome
15. Kennedy disease

An absent uterus in a normal appearing female is encountered in only two conditions: androgen insensitivity syndrome and mullerian agenesis (the Mayer-Rokitansky-Kuster-Hauser syndrome). The latter is easily diagnosed because of the presence of pubic and axillary hair and a normal 46, XX karyotype.

In Swyer's syndrome where together with 46XY female there is deficiency of AMH, at SRY gene location, as a result the uterus grows. So these patients can become pregnant from donor eggs, though they are 46XY female.

Laboratory studies

Akaryotype is essential to differentiate an under masculinized male from a masculinized female. The levels of testosterone and dihydrotestosterone (DHT) is essential to establish the presence of normal steroidogenesis. If the testosterone level is low for age, obtain levels of dehydroepiandrosterone (DHEA), androstenedione, and their precursors, 17-hydroxypregnolone and 17-hydroxyprogesterone.

The evidence of defective steroidogenesis suggest testicular dysgenesis or Leydig cell aplasia / hypoplasia. Mutation analysis of the androgen receptor gene is due to more than 40 CAG tandem repeats in exon 1 of the AR and are diagnostic in Kennedy disease²².

Imaging studies

A pelvic ultrasound examination is essential to identify any Müllerian structures, such as uterus or fallopian tubes. The presence of mullerian structure is inconsistent with a diagnosis of complete androgen insensitivity syndrome or partial androgen insensitivity syndrome.

Medical care for AIS

Medical care has two aspects: hormone replacement therapy (HRT) and psychological support. HRT is the first and less complex aspect. Most patients with complete androgen insensitivity syndrome (CAIS) and partial androgen insensitivity syndrome (PAIS) undergo gonadectomy at some point in their life. For patients with complete androgen insensitivity syndrome, hormone therapy means estrogen replacement. The general belief is that these women do not require progesterone because they have no uterus.

HRT

The patients with partial androgen insensitivity syndrome who have a male gender identity, may be treated with testosterone and/or dihydrotestosterone (DHT). Others who have a female gender identity will require estrogens. The advantage of DHT is that it cannot be aromatized to estrogen.

All patients with complete androgen insensitivity syndrome, hormone therapy almost always consists of estrogen replacement. For individuals with partial androgen insensitivity syndrome, who have a male gender identity, however, may be treated with testosterone and/or dihydrotestosterone (DHT).

Medical care for AIS

No medical consensus has been reached about these therapies; no dosage schedules have been established. The therapy may vary depending on the nature of the gene defect.

Psychological counseling

The psychological support is probably the most important aspect of medical care from the patient's point of view. In a family with an affected infant, the parents are the primary clients. The parents need genetic counseling to understand the nature of the condition and the risk of recurrence (25% for each subsequent pregnancy) as well as to identify other potential carriers.

Surgical care

For individuals with androgen insensitivity syndrome, the standard of care is an orchidectomy to prevent possible malignant degeneration of the testes. The surgery during the late teenage years or early 20s has been preferred. In addition, many women with androgen insensitivity syndrome require vaginal lengthening procedures. So the orchidectomy and vaginal lengthening procedures may be performed concurrently.

Genetic counseling

Since androgen insensitivity syndrome is inherited in an X-linked manner. The affected 46, XY individuals are almost always infertile. Each offspring of a female known to carry an AR pathogenic variant (heterozygote) is at a 25% risk for each of the following: Having a 46,XY karyotype and being affected, having a 46, XY karyotype and being unaffected, having a 46, XX karyotype and being a carrier, having a 46, XX karyotype and not being a carrier²³.

Consultations

Initial consultation for the child with androgen insensitivity syndrome should include a geneticist and a pediatric endocrinologist. Because this is a particularly stressful diagnostic possibility for many families, it is important to consult an appropriate mental health professional to provide psychological and emotional support.

Complications

Osteoporosis and psychological sequelae are the two major complications of androgen insensitivity syndrome. Their risk can be decreased significantly by appropriate therapeutic intervention and counseling.

Summary

In a normal looking female with primary amenorrhoea besides ruling out other common conditions three differential diagnosis to be considered:

AIS	no uterus XY female
MRKH Syndrome	no uterus XX female
Swyer's syndrome,	uterus present XY female

In MRKH (Mayer-Rokitansky-Kuster-Hauser) syndrome, the normal 46XX present with normal pubic and axillary hair but there is Mullerian agenesis. The incidence of Swyer's syndrome is as low as 1 in 1,00,000 female, 46XY chromosomes and SRY locus on Y chromosome is deleted or mutated, so no secretion of androgen or AMH from gonads takes place, resulting the development of female phenotype with uterus. In androgen insensitivity syndrome AIS, the Y chromosome is intact and the defect in androgen binding to its receptors. So the external genitalia is that of female, there is absence of mullerian structure due to presence of AMH. In both cases gonads are dysgenetic and need removal because of high incidence of malignancy reported. So in Swyer's syndrome patient can become pregnant with donor egg. In MRKH patient has own eggs and required surrogacy for pregnancy. In AIS patient has to take donor eggs and husband's sperms together with surrogacy and then she can become mother.

Conclusion

AIS is a rare entity, educate patients and families about the full nature of androgen insensitivity syndrome. As the child matures, education should include information about issues such as vaginal hypoplasia and osteoporosis. Their gender identity is a sensitive issue and should be handled respectfully.

Announcement

Applications are invited for the post of Vice President AOGD for the year 2017-18.
Applications should reach the AOGD office by 30th April, 2015.

FETAL MEDICINE

Changing trends in diagnosis and management of rhesus alloimmunization

Nirmala Agarwal

Sant Parmanand Hospital, Civil Lines, Delhi

Introduction

Rhesus negative pregnant woman carrying a rhesus positive fetus can get antibody response to antigen in rhesus positive fetal red cell. These antibodies cross placenta and cause hemolysis leading to fetal anemia, intrauterine death or hemolytic disease of new born. One in 10,000 live births is affected by maternal rhesus alloimmunization.¹ Use of antenatal, postnatal and post abortal anti D prophylaxis has minimized the incidence of this disease in developed countries. However in developing and under developed countries, lack of prophylaxis program results in still births in 14% of affected pregnancies and 50% of neonates die or have cerebral injury.² Rhesus C and E antigens and other red cell antigens also contribute to perinatal morbidity and mortality.

It is important to establish as early as possible whether the fetus of index pregnancy is affected or not. Determining paternal zygosity has been proposed as first step in the management of red cell alloimmunization. When paternal genotype is heterozygous, only 50% of fetus will be affected. Molecular diagnostics tests are developed to detect fetal DNA and fetal Rh in maternal plasma.³ Fetal middle cerebral artery peak systolic velocity (MCA PSV) has now been an established mode for detection of fetal anemia during antenatal follow up.^{4,5} Management of fetal anemia in severe cases involves in utero fetal blood transfusion (IUT).⁶ Immunoglobulin therapy looks promising though costly as it is noninvasive modality of treatment and need for IUT and neonatal exchange transfusion is reduced.^{7,8}

Detection of Rh alloimmunization

All pregnant women should undergo blood grouping, Rh typing and antibody screening in the first antenatal visit.

In Rh negative women, if father is Rh negative, no further testing is necessary as fetus will be Rh negative. If the father is Rh positive and antibody screening is positive, antibody titers are done. If antibody titer is 1:32 or more, immunization has occurred.

Management of Rh negative pregnancy

Rh negative pregnant women can be divided into 2 groups.

(a) Rh negative nonimmunized women:

(b) Rh negative immunized women

(a) Management of Rh negative nonimmunized women:
Management is described in Fig (1)

(b) Management of Rh negative immunized women:

In women who got immunized in prior pregnancy or secondary to administration of incompatible blood transfusion, paternal and fetal Rh phenotype and genotype need to be determined.

Fetal Rh determination:

Fetal Rh genotype can be determined using cells collected by chorionic villus biopsy (CVS), fetal blood sampling or amniocentesis. By CVS the advantage is early diagnosis but it has potential disadvantage of increasing the severity of alloimmunization if fetus is Rh positive. Fetal blood sampling allows fetal Rh phenotype to be known rapidly by blood bank serology but it is more invasive, has greater morbidity and mortality than CVS.

Amniocentesis

Amniocentesis is a simple method to obtain fetal tissue and is safe. DNA extracted from amniocytes is tested for Rhesus D (RHD) gene. Cell free DNA testing to determine RHD genotyping from maternal serum in late first trimester or early second trimester has recently been introduced in Europe and USA as noninvasive early diagnostic tool for fetal Rh determination.⁹

Subsequent affected pregnancy:

Anti-Rh antibody titers can be used to detect development of fetal anemia during first affected pregnancy because there is good correlation between antibody titer and fetal anemia.

Antibody titers are done every 4 weeks during pregnancy starting from 20 weeks once antibody testing has become positive. If it crosses critical level (1:32 or 1:64) or there is significant increase in titer, fetal anemia needs further assessment either by:

1. Amniocentesis and the concentration of bilirubin in amniotic fluid and plot with Liley graph (Figure 3) to estimate severity of fetal anemia and follow instructions as in Figure 3.¹⁰
2. Severity of anemia can be assessed by MCA PSV Doppler assessment of fetus from 24 weeks of gestation and is carried out every 2 weeks¹¹. Plot this value as in Figure 4¹³ or web-based calculators such as the one found at www.perinatology.com can be used to convert the actual middle cerebral artery peak systolic velocity to multiples of the median. When MCA PSV Doppler value is more than 1.5 MoM fetal blood sampling is done by cordocentesis.
3. Fetal blood sampling (FBS) and intrauterine transfusion (IUT). Fetal hematocrit of $\geq 30\%$ is followed with further Doppler every 2 weeks and $< 30\%$ is assessed according to gestational age and may require IUT.

Early delivery after steroid administration

Timing of delivery depends on how severe the fetus is affected by hemolytic process. Betamethasone is recommended for fetal lung maturity.

Additional treatment modalities

Administration of intravenous immunoglobulin appears an attractive therapy when MCA PSV exceeds 1.5 MoM. In alloimmunized women this therapy can be started early in pregnancy even before fetal anemia is detected by MCA Doppler or cordocentesis.⁷ This reduces the need for invasive therapy such as cordocentesis, IUT and neonatal exchange transfusion.^{7,8} The mechanism of action is still not well understood but may entail down regulation of the maternal immune response, placental antigenic blockade, or antigenic blockade at the level of the fetal reticulo-endothelial system. Whatever the mechanism, it is not uniformly effective in inhibiting haemolysis, but when it does, serum bilirubin concentrations fall. This treatment modality is appropriate only in selected cases, for example, very early disease. It may prolong the time interval before the first intrauterine treatment is required and reduce neonatal exchange transfusion.^{7,8}

The cost benefit of the two modalities has not been quantified. However, the distinct advantage of immunoglobulin therapy is that it remains non-invasive.

Immunization to paternal leucocytes in an animal model has been described and has been shown to prevent haemolytic disease.¹² This technique, although showing promise, is still not yet in clinical use.

Conclusion

Modern understanding of rhesus alloimmunization has resulted in a better outcome in the recent past. Tests for paternal zygosity and fetal RHD genotype by cell free fetal DNA typing are recommended in cases where paternal zygosity is unknown. Amniocentesis was once the main management tool for fetal assessment of anemia but MCA Doppler has replaced amniocentesis and has additional benefit of being a non-invasive test.^{13,14,15} Cordocentesis along with IUT is definitive therapy needed for correction of fetal anemia but the need for this invasive procedure may be reduced by early administration of immunoglobulin.

AOGD report 2014-15

New initiatives taken

A. Introduction of all past presidents as Ex-officio members of the AOGD executive committee.

B. MDTM (Multidisciplinary Team Management meetings)
MDTMs were initiated and organized by RCOG North Zone India in association with Indraprastha Apollo Hospital under the aegis of AOGD which was done every third saturday of the month. It involved discussion of high risk cases involving multispecialty teams, including neurology, neurosurgery, gastroenterology, bariatric surgery, endocrinology, ENT, ophthalmology, physicians, intensivists with obstetricians & gynecologists. Eight meetings were held in 2014, 24 complex case scenarios were discussed and was attended by 164 delegates of different specialities. It was well appreciated by all participants as there was a valuable opportunity for face to face interaction among all different specialists and they would come out with the best management protocol in the cases discussed.

C. Obstetrics drills and Medico legal issues.

This year we initiated the dissemination of obstetric drills under the leadership of Dr. Sharda Jain. An obstetric drill was delivered at each monthly clinical meeting of AOGD and was printed in the monthly AOGD bulletin. 14 drills were delivered on eclampsia, PPH, DIC, placenta accrete, rape victim examination, MTP regulations, death on the table. We are grateful to Dr Sharda Jain, Dr Jyoti Bhaskar, Dr Jyoti Agarwal, Dr Leena Wadhwa, Dr Archana Verma, Dr Manju Puri, Dr Sharda Patra, Dr Sangeeta Gupta, Dr Ila Gupta and Dr Sunita Fotedar for their valuable contribution.

Dr Sharda Jain took in charge of Medicolegal issues and enlightened us with the newer aspects of this issue.

D. Joint initiative with AICC RCOG and ICOG.

- AOGD-AICC RCOG- Ethicon biosurgery Endoscopy workshops

It was a two days workshop with hands-on endoscopy workshop at Fortis Hospital, Vasant Kunj on the first day and wet lab and practice on endotrainers at Ethicon institute on the second day. Seven workshops were organized which was attended by 85 participants.

- AOGD-AICC RCOG Laparoscopy- Hysteroscopy-Vaginal surgery workshops

These were three days monthly hands on laparoscopy, hysteroscopy and vaginal workshop at Fortis Flt Lt Rajan Dhall Hospital at Vasant Kunj started from the month of January. It was restricted to 10 participants per workshop, about 15 surgeries were demonstrated in each workshop. These workshops will continue in the coming year under the joint aeges of the AOGD endoscopy committee under the leadership of Dr Neema Sharma and jointly conducted by the AICC RCOG under the leadership of Dr UP Jha and earn 21 credit points by the ICOG.

E. New subcommittees were initiated in the year 2014-15

- Cervical cancer screening & prevention committee of AOGD which was chaired by Dr Shashi Prateek. Health education, documentary films and around 1000 free Pap smears were done in different villages and low socioeconomic areas by this committee. It partnered with an Inner wheel NGO, Rajiv Gandhi institute and health wealth foundation.

- A breast cancer screening committee of AOGD chaired by Dr Ramesh Sareen & Dr Col Pant. They took an initiative of spreading awareness for breast cancer screening. Meetings were held with young breast cancer survivors for counselling and diet for prevention of breast cancer. They launched a website for young breast cancer survivors, organized public forum and supported the inaugural program and dinner at the annual conference of AOGD with a memorable mesmerizing musical evening.

F. Monthly clinical meetings

To avoid individual variations in marking, this year AOGD had four esteemed judges for all the clinical meetings. We would like to thank Dr SS Trivedi, Dr Kamal Buckshee, Dr Urmil Sharma & Dr Chitra Raghunandan for their valuable contribution.

G. Lucky dip

Lucky dip was initiated for conjuring up prizes under Dr Nirmala Aggarwal and Dr Anjila Aneja so as to increase the attendance in the monthly clinical meetings. We thank Ms Deepika of Jagson Pal Pharmaceutical and Mr Gautam Aggarwal of Medmidas company for sponsoring all the prizes.

H. Finance advisory committee

The committee was formed for taking an important crucial decisions about the finances of the AOGD. Dr SN Mukherjee, Dr Indrani Ganguli, Dr Suneeta mittal, Dr Usha Gupta, Dr SS Trivedi, Dr Alka Kriplani, Dr Chitra Raghunandan, Dr Neerja Goel, Dr Pratima Mittal & Dr Sudha Prasad agreed to be the part of this committee. We had one meeting in the month of september to discuss the financial issues where six members were present.

I. AOGD diaries / books

Delhi diary with protocols and drills was distributed to all the AOGD members to update themselves with the current evidence.

Pocket diary with year planner 2015 was circulated in the eve of New Year.

Delhi book of counselling and consent is under production.

J. AOGD has started a multicentric study with Naari division of Jagsonpal Company of data collection that will assess the efficacy and side effect profile of a recently introduced drug Dienogest.

K. AOGD professional development awards were initiated this year to support rising young doctors wanting to develop their skills in Obstetrics and Gynaecology. There were four applicants who were all awarded the certificates and prizes.

L. AOGD initiatives with FOGSI

- Certificate course on contraception in clinical practice was done in Safdarjung hospital under guidance of Dr Pratima Mittal
- PPH workshop was organized at Fortis Shalimar Bagh with Safe motherhood committee by Dr Sheela Mane and Dr Gomathi.
- Newborn screening symposium 2014 -Obstetricians has a role in NBS was done in collaboration with National Neonatal Forum (NNF), FOGSI Perinatology Committee, Association of Obstetrician & Gynecologists of Delhi & Fortis La Femme, New Delhi
- Dr Usha Krishna Quiz on theme topic "High risk pregnancy" was conducted by Dr Manju Khimani, Chairperson safe motherhood committee

M. AOGD took an initiative to empower GPs.

- Lectures and video presentation on MTP regulation and common gynaecological conditions were undertaken by Dr Sharda Jain, Dr UP Jha, Dr Neema and Dr Ramandeep at DMA head office.
- Panel discussion on Gynae common problems was held in the Annual conference of DMA on 11th January 2015.

N. Elections conducted in 2014-15.

Nominations for the post of President 2017-18

Dr Abha Singh (Proposed by Dr Chitra Raghunandan, Seconded by Ratna Biswas)

Dr Geeta Mehndirata (Proposed by Dr Indrani Ganguli, Seconded by Dr Mala Srivastava)

Dr Malvika Sabharwal (Proposed by Dr SS Trivedi, Seconded by Dr Santosh Sabharwal)

Dr Nirmala Agarwal (President), Dr Sonal Bathla(Vice President) (Proposed by Dr Urmil Sharma, Seconded by Dr Shweta Balani)

Dr Shalini Rajaram(President), Dr Kiran Guleria(Vice President) (Proposed by Dr Gita Radhakrishnan, Seconded by Dr Amita Suneja)

Applications have been invited for the post of vice president 2017-18
Following sub-committee chairpersons have been elected for 2015-17

Dr Shalini Rajaram	Oncology subcommittee
Dr Abha Singh	Safemotherhood committee
Dr Susheela Gupta	Reproductive endocrinology
Dr Mamta Mittal	Adolescent health
Dr Ranjana Sharma	Urogynaecology
Dr Neema Sharma	Endoscopy
Dr Ramandeep	Endometriosis
Dr Chanchal & Dr Seema Thakur	Fetal medicine and Genetics

O. 36th Annual conference of AOGD

- Conference was organised at India Habitat centre on 25th & 26th October 2014.
- 191 faculty delivered lectures and chaired various sessions.
- 299 pre-registered and 79 spot-registered delegates attended the conference.
- There were 7 pre and post-conference workshops.
- Pre-conference free paper, poster and the video presentation competition was conducted on 20th and 21st October 2014

AOGD subcommittees report 2014-15

Endoscopy committee

Chairperson Dr Sanjivini Khanna

- Endoscopy committee and DGF organized a “CME on PCOS” at Fortis Hospital Shalimar Bagh on 16th May, 2014
- Jeewan mala hospital with Endoscopy Committee AOGD had a certified training program in laparoscopy and hysteroscopy at Jeewan Mala Hospital, New Delhi. 2.9-14th June.
- CME on “Gynaec surgeries and robotics” was jointly organised by Medanta, The Medicity, Gurgaon and Endoscopy Committee AOGD. 14th June, 2014
- Endoscopy Committee AOGD and DGF North organised a seminar on “Cervical screening guidelines 2013 and HPV Vaccination update.” Speaker was Dr Sharda Jain on 9th July, 2014. Safdarjung hospital with endoscopy committee AOGD organised a CME on “Pouch of Douglas” at Safdarjung Hospital on 12th July, 2014.
- Endoscopy Committee AOGD and DGF north organised a session on “Caesarean Myomectomy “by Dr Alka Kriplani and a discussion on “Current status of morcellation in laparoscopic Myomectomy.” by Dr.Sanjivni Khanna at the auditorium, Fortis Hospital Shalimar Bagh on 18th July, 2014
- Endoscopy Committee AOGD with Jeevan Mala hospital organised a workshop on “Laparoscopic endo suturing” at Jeevan Mala Hospital on 19th July, 2014.
- AOGD-RCOG ETHICON workshop at the ETHICON institute and Forits Vasant Kunj on 11th, 12th July, 2014.
- AOGD-RCOG ETHICON workshop at the ETHICON institute and Forits Vasant Kunj on 29th, 30th July, 2014
- DGF in association with endoscopy committee of AOGD organized a CME at Fortis Hospital, Shalimar Bagh on energy sources in Gynae Endoscopy on 20th august, 2014 AICC RCOG -AOGD ETHICON endoscopy course cum hands on laparoscopy workshop at the ETHICON institute and Fortis Vasant Kunj on 12th, 13th September, 2014
- AICC RCOG-AOGD ETHICON endoscopy course cum hands on hysteroscopy workshop on Hysteroscopy at the ETHICON institute and Forits Vasant Kunj on 24th September, 2014
- “CME on minimally invasive Gynae surgery and adolescent health issues” at Crowned Plaza Okhla Organised by Dr. Anjila Aneja on 27th september, 2014.
- Pre AOGD conference live operative workshop in endoscopy was organised at Fortis hospital Shalimar Bagh on 27th September, 2014. The workshop was attended by 100 delegates. The operating faculty included Dr Shailesh Puntambekar, Dr Nutan Jain, Dr Kiran Coelho, Dr Urvashi Jha, Dr Alka Kriplani, Dr Malvika Sabharwal. 15 live endoscopic surgeries were demonstrate which included radical hysterectomies, Myomectomy, tubal cannulation, Hysteroscopic Myomectomy / polypectomy amongst others.
- DGF North in association with an AOGD Endoscopy committee organised a CME at Fortis Hospital Shalimar Bagh on “Abdominal access in previous surgery” and “The inside story: Pelvic surgery following previous abdominal surgery” on 6th February, 2015.
- AICC RCOG hands on Hysteroscopy laparoscopy and vaginal surgery course at Fortis hospital, Vasant Kunj on 19th, 20th and 21st February, 2015.
- The North Delhi OBG study group, Delhi Gyne forum (North), AOGD endoscopy committee, outer Delhi fun group, Dept of OBG Max Hospital Shalimar Bagh & Max Pitampura organised a CME at the sunder Lal Jain hospital on ‘Guidelines and updates on endometriosis” and “Use of Dinogest in the management of endometriosis and adenomyosis” on 19th Feb 2015.
- AICC RCOG hands on Hysteroscopy laparoscopy and vaginal surgery course at Fortis hospital, Vasant Kunj on 19th, 20th and 21st March, 2015

Cervical cancer screening & prevention committee

Chairperson: Dr Shashi Prateek

12 awareness and cervical cancer prevention camps, 4 health talks, 1000+ free pap smears were conducted last year

- 23/6/14 Free cervical cancer screening camp in mangolpuri area for under privileged section of the society through NMPS GRC (Gender Resource Center).
- 24/6/14 Cancer awareness program in Alipur for adolescent girls in association with Nehru Yuva Kendra.
- 17/07/14 Screening camp with JEET GRC (Gender Resource Centre) for underprivileged females of Budh Vihar, Vijay vihar, Rithala urban village etc. (North West Delhi).
- 19/07/14 Screening camp with NMPS GRC (Gender Resource Centre) for underprivileged females of Mangol Puri, Sultan puri (North West Delhi).
- 22/07/14 Screening Camp in Govind Puri at SABHARWAL NURSING HOME.
- 24/07/14 Screening camp with SAMARTH GRC (Gender Resource Centre) for underprivileged females of Shahabad Dairy, Resettlement Colonies of Rohini (North West Delhi).
- 26/07/14 Awareness & screening camp in Nihal Vihar near Paschim Vihar in association with KALAWATI WELFARE EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY.
- 13/08/14 Screening camp with NMPS GRC (Gender Resource Centre) for underprivileged females of Mangol Puri, Sultan puri (North West Delhi).
- 14/08/14 Screening camp with JEET GRC (Gender Resource Centre) for underprivileged females of Budh Vihar, Vijay vihar, Rithala urban village etc. (North West Delhi).
- 20/08/14 Awarness talk on cervical cancer in RASHTRIYA SHAKTI VIDYALYA, HASTSAL (Near Vikas Puri).
- 25/08/14 Screening camp with SAMARTH GRC (Gender Resource Centre) for underprivileged females of Shahabad Dairy, Resettlement Colonies of Rohini (North West Delhi).
- 26/08/14 Awareness & screening Camp in SHIVAJI COLLEGE (DU).

Safe motherhood committee

Chairperson: Dr. Manju Khemani

- 24th April, 2014 - CME on 'Revised guidelines for PPTCT by NACO' at Hindu Rao Hospital
- 15th May, 2014 - CME on 'Renal and Urinary Tract Disease' at Hindu Rao Hospital
- 20th May, 2014 - Hands on training on 'Abdominal Wall Closure and Perineal Tear Repair' at Hindu Rao Hospital

- June 2014 - PPH and ECLAMPSIA DRILL at Fortis Hospital Ghaziabad.
- 11th July, 2014 - PPH and ECLAMPSIA DRILL at Kailash Hospital, Noida.
- 26th July, 2014 - PPH WORKSHOP Organized by FOGSI at Fortis Shalimar Bagh.
- 14th July, 2014 - 'World Population Day' was celebrated. Theme PPIUCD.
- 11th July, 2014 - CME on IUCD Updates at Lady Hardinge medical college.
- 12th July, 2014 - Hands on training on IUCD Insertion at Lady Hardinge medical college.
- 18th July, 2014 - CME on labour management at Saket city hospital in association with Isoparb.

- Organized a CME on "Anemia in Pregnancy" on 21st August, 2014 at ESI PGIMSR Basaidarapur, Delhi, Webcasted to all India PGIMSRs & Medical Colleges.
- 20th September, 2014 - Episiotomy and perineal repair hands on animal tissue CME cum Workshop at Lady Hardinge medical college.
- 27th October, 2014 - Pre congress workshop on advanced obstetric skills at Max super speciality hospital, Saket.

Urogynaecology committee

Chairperson: Dr JB Sharma

- Urogynaecology workshop was held by Dr JB Sharma as Organising secretary & Prof Alka Kriplani as Organising Chairperson at Gynae Seminar Room, AIIMS, New Delhi on 14th March, 2015 with Dr Jagdish Gandhi, Consultant Urogynaecologist, University Hospital, Hull, UK and Dr Mangesh Narwadkar, Chairperson FOGSI Urogynaec Committee were the faculty.
- Female Pelvic Floor Disorders workshop was held on 27th June, 2014 in Medanta, The Medicity Hospital, Gurgaon by Dr Amita Jain.
- Urogynaec Update & CME was held in Sir Ganga Ram Hospital, New Delhi on 11th December, 2015 by Dr Gita Mediratta. Dr Mangesh Narwadkar Chairperson FOGSI Urogynaec Committee & Dr JB Sharma Chairperson AOGD Urogynaec Committee were faculty.
- Post AOGD Conference workshop on Urogynaec was held in Sant Parmanand Hospital, New Delhi by Dr Nirmala Agarwal.

Infertility committee

Chairperson: Dr Kuldeep Jain

- IUI workshop was organised by KJIVF and laparoscopy centre on 13th Aug 2014
- “Endometriosis - Current concepts and Management” CME was organized on 13th sept 2014 by Origyn Fertility and IVF (Max Hospital, Pitampura)
- Post AOGD Conference video workshop on ART was organised by KJIVF and laparoscopy centre on 26th OCT 2014
- Live workshop and conference on QA & QC in ART was held under the aegis of IFS and infertility committee, AOGD on 21st November 2014 at Seminar Hall Level III, Army Hospital (Research and Referral), New Delhi
- CME & Video Session on “Enhancing skills in infertility” was organized under the aegis of IFS & Infertility committee, AOGD at the Maulana Azad Medical College on the 15th March, 2015
- “Ferticon 2015” Organized by KJIVF and Laparoscopy centre at Wood Apple on 20TH March 2015
- “Infertility management for gynaecologists”was organized under the aegis of IFS & Infertility committee, AOGD, on 29th march, 2015.

Rural health committee

- Health care activities

Six anemia detection camps, 6 comprehensive health checkup camps, 3 eye checkup camps & cataract surgery, 3 Health care awareness camps, 5 Cancer awareness and detection camps (in collaboration with cervical cancer awareness and detection camp) were organized in 2014-15.

- Environmental and pollution control activities

Tree plantation was done in Mandi village, painting competition was organized on the theme topic “green earth” and documentary film was made on the waste management.

- Socio welfare activities

Eye camp and cataract operation was performed on 40 patients on 28th September 2014.

Spectacles were distributed to the poor patients identified in camps on 18th January 2015

Blood donation camp was organised in Mandi village on 4th February 2015.

DHEA

DHEA: Emerging role in infertility

Anshu Agarwal, Vandana Saini, Mamta Gupta
Hindu Rao Hospital

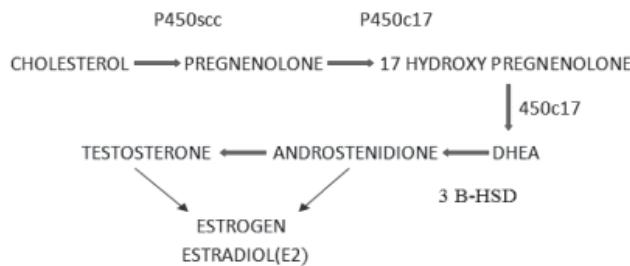

Introduction

DHEA is a naturally occurring hormone in the human body, identified in 1934. It is the most abundant circulating steroid hormone in humans¹, produced in the adrenal glands, gonads, and brain², where it functions predominantly as a metabolic intermediate in the biosynthesis of the androgen, oestrogen the sex steroids^{3,4}.

DHEA production peaks in mid-20s. In most people, production gradually declines with age⁵. By age of 80, levels of DHEA fall by as much as 80%-90% compared to what they are during youth adulthood⁶.

Metabolism

DHEA is derived from cholesterol and serves as a precursor to 50% of androgen in adult men and 75% of active estrogens in premenopausal women. In postmenopausal women DHEA contributes to 100% of active estrogens⁷.

DHEA supplements can increase the level of these hormones. That's why a number of claims have been made about their potential health benefits.

Low levels of DHEA are associated with ageing Alzheimer, obesity, type 2 DM, immune dysfunction, autoimmune disease, cancer, depression, loss of well being, CVS diseases, osteoporosis, erectile dysfunction, low libido and infertility.

DHEA supplementation

Instead of direct administration of oestrogen replacement therapy, DHEA supplementation provides a reservoir that various tissues can convert into androgens and estrogens so that each organ including ovary has just the right concentration of testosterone and estrogens.

Pharmacodynamics

Mechanism of action

The effect of oral DHEA may be due to weak androgenic⁸ or estrogenic activity and to the fact that it is metabolized to androgens and estrogens. Upon oral administration, DHEA is mostly converted to DHEA-S, which circulates in the blood far longer than DHEA. Circulating DHEA-S acts as a reserve upon which tissues can draw. Once taken up by the tissues, DHEA-S is converted back to DHEA, which can then be locally converted to androgens and estrogens or exert direct action.

Absorption and excretion

Only Micronised forms of DHEA are absorbed. Supplements are made from substances called Disogenin which is present in soy and wild yams. DHEA is absorbed into the bloodstream and a 100 mg dose can raise levels of androstenedione (and ultimately testosterone and oestrogen levels) by up to 700%⁹. It is metabolized in the liver and is excreted as bile salts and eliminated in the faeces⁹.

Role of DHEA in infertility

In decreased ovarian reserve (DOR) & premature ovarian failure (POF) there are decreased number of ovarian follicles, which leads to reduction in oestrogen level leading to absence of LH surge (which is responsible for ovulation) and thus responsible for female infertility¹⁰.

Various studies regarding the role of DHEA in infertility have concluded that

1. DHEA supplementation improves follicular dynamics and leads to better ovarian function in women with DOR and POF leading to increase number of oocyte and embryos favouring clinical pregnancies^{11,12}.
2. Its supplementation increase ovarian steroidogenesis, decreases follicular atresia, which further increases medically active acts and thus increase antral follicles.
3. Reduces the miscarriage rate and improve cumulative pregnancy outcome¹³.
4. DHEA supplementation shows increase in IGF1 concentrations to potentiate the gonadotrophin action in women with diminished ovarian reserves¹⁴.
5. Comparative results of IVF before and after treatment with DHEA showed an increase in embryo yields, embryo grade and cell number in an IVF cycle and thus reduces IVF cancellation rates^{14,15}.
6. DHEA supplementation facilitates gonadotrophins effect, it also reduces the dose of gonadotrophins in IVF cycles¹⁶.
7. DHEA supplementation may improve pregnancy outcomes, however the data is still preliminary¹⁷.

Dosage of DHEA in infertility

According to researchers from Tel Aviv University study conducted showed the women who received 75mg of DHEA supplementation before starting fertility treatment were 3 times more likely to conceive compared to the women who received fertility treatment alone.

The General dose of DHEA is 75 mg daily, divided into three equal doses (to avoid stomach upset) started at least 6 weeks prior to the IVF cycle. Supplementation is stopped once a woman has conceived, as the body produces enough DHEA during pregnancy.

Side effects

Oily skin, acne, skin thickening, hair loss, stomach upset, high blood pressure, changes in menstrual cycle, facial hair in women, deepening of the voice in women, fatigue, nasal congestion, headache, rapid or irregular heart beat, insomnia, unfavorable changes in cholesterol levels.

Additional benefits

It can be used in depression, obesity, systemic lupus (SLE) and adrenal insufficiency. National Standard and the NIH say the evidence is unclear whether DHEA has any significant benefit in treating conditions such as: alzheimer's disease, low bone density, heart disease, cervical cancer, chronic fatigue syndrome, crohn's disease, psoriasis, rheumatoid arthritis, schizophrenia and sexual dysfunctioin.

Contraindications

Breast cancer, uterine cancer, prostate cancer, ovarian malignancy, endometriosis, uterine fibroids, liver diseases, pregnancy, breast feeding, diabetes, mood disorders, polycystic ovarian syndrome (relative) and cholesterol problems.

Conclusion:

DHEA is a prohormone for estrogen and testosterone, proposed as an anti ageing hormone with possible uses in various diseases. Its use is emerging in the infertility treatment options available to women. Studies are showing significant results in improving pregnancy rates in women with premature ovarian failure, advanced maternal age, and diminished ovarian reserves. Cochrane review has concluded that DHEA supplementation may improve pregnancy outcomes, however the data is still preliminary¹⁷.

HOW TO DO IT ?

Laparoscopic adenomyectomy

Neema Sharma, Urvashi Prasad Jha, Ramandeep Kaur
Fortis Flt Lt Rajan Dhall Hospital, Vasant Kunj, New Delhi

Indication

Laparoscopic adenomyectomy is recommended in all patients of abnormal uterine bleeding, pelvic pain, infertility, and recurrent miscarriage with adenomyosis who wish to preserve their uterus.

Consent

Consent should include name of proposed procedure, course of treatment, intended benefits and risks.

Laparoscopic adenomyectomy may be associated with the following risks

- Risk of conversion to an open procedure.
- Postoperative adhesion formation around the uterus or within its cavity.
- Recurrence of adenomyoma
- Uterine rupture in subsequent pregnancy - It is well known that adenomyectomy surgery is associated with a higher risk of uterine rupture in later pregnancy. Thus, women who have had a adenomyectomy should get caesarean delivery to avoid the risk of uterine rupture which almost always is fatal to the fetus.
- Major intraoperative and postoperative complications associated with laparoscopic adenomyectomy include the bladder, bowel, and ureteral injury, intraoperative and postoperative haemorrhage requiring transfusion, and unintended conversion to hysterectomy, thrombosis, and embolism.
- Morcellation

Worrisome sequelae of open power morcellation

Open power morcellation of uterine tissue, usually results in small bits of tissue spilling inside the peritoneal cavity. The enhanced growth potential of the uterine tumor cells in some patients may result in the postoperative growth of this tissue scattered by morcellation in the abdomino-pelvic and the laparoscopic ports.

Preoperative

Recommended preoperative studies include:

Imaging studies such as MRI or vaginal sonography with colour Doppler to detect abnormal flow patterns

Endometrial biopsy in cases with abnormal uterine bleeding

Cervical cytology.

There are currently no established imaging studies that can reliably detect a uterine sarcoma preoperatively, and endometrial biopsy has a low sensitivity for detecting leiomyosarcoma.

Anaesthesia - General anaesthesiaPatient Position – Low lithotomy Position*Instruments

Uterine manipulator

Injection needle

Myoma screw (5mm, 10mm)

Curved scissors

Hook scissors

Harmonic forceps and hook

Bipolar coagulation forceps

Grasping forceps

Suction irrigation

Needle holders

Sutures (5cm, 4cm curved needle, vicryl 1.0, Vlock suture)

Uterine manipulator

The placement of an uterine manipulator is helpful for obtaining optimal vision of uterus, especially those with a posterior location, maintaining the uterus in the centre of the operative field and applying strong counter-traction while taking out the adenomyoma and suturing. Alternately,a myoma screw can be used for uterine manipulation through an additional port.

Trocar placement

The insertion of the trocars is crucial to accomplish the operation. In most instances, when the uterus is small, the laparoscope can be placed in the standard umbilical position, using the closed- or open-entry technique of choice. However, depending on the size of the uterus, a supraumbilical or palmer's point insertion may be required for a very large uterus in order to gain optimal views and room for surgical manipulation. Lee and Wang suggest to place the laparoscope at the midpoint between the umbilicus and the xiphoid process (Lee-Huang point) if the uterine size is greater than 14 weeks gestation; the Lee-Huang point could be useful not only to increase the working distance in case of large uterus, but also to prevent injuries in the umbilical area when adhesions are expected, notably in patients with previous abdominal or pelvic surgery¹. For the same aim we have found that the Jha's point 2cm below the xiphisternum and 1 cm lateral to the midline thus avoiding falciparum ligament gives a good panoramic view in a very large uterus. Two operating secondary ports (commonly with a diameter of 5 and 10 mm) are then placed lateral to the deep inferior epigastric arteries. It can be of benefit to place these accessory trocars slightly higher than usual². Alternately ipsilateral ports may be placed by some surgeons.

Vasopressin infiltration

To suppress bleeding during the operation 1ampule of vasopressin (20IU) is diluted in 200-400ml of normal saline and is infiltrated into the uterus at several points.

Surgical steps for laparoscopic adenomyectomy

Various methods have been adopted for adenomyectomy

1. The surgical procedure involved resection of adenomatous lesions with a thin (≤ 0.5 cm) margin (wedge-shaped removal) after sagittal incision in the uterine body. Once a thick adenomyotic tissue is identified, it is held using a grasping forceps to allow strong traction. Wedge is taken out with scissors or harmonics. The aim of uterine suture is to obtain a strong scar and minimize the risk of haematoma, so avoiding a number of complications, ranging from post-operative bleeding to uterine rupture in the next pregnancy. Depending on the depth, a one- or two-layer deep mattress suture may be required. Mattress or figure of eight sutures are first placed to close the deep myometrial layer then a running suture is used to close the superficial myometrium and the serosa.

In a study of 70 patients who attempted pregnancy after the above procedure, naturally ($n = 21$) or by assisted reproduction treatment ($n = 49$), 30% achieved a clinical pregnancy, and 16 resulted in a full-term live birth. Dysmenorrhoea and hypermenorrhoea were reduced post surgery. Only one patient had relapsed adenomyosis³.

2. Two flap method -The uterus is incised from the fundus to the upper cervical margin exposing the endometrial cavity. Adenomyotic tissue is removed using a scalpel, scissors, or monopolar electrical bovie. The endometrial cavity is repaired with interrupted sutures using 2-0 vicryl. One side of the serosal flap was used to cover the endometrial side of the uterus. The second serosal flap covered the first flap after removal of the serosal surface of the first flap⁴.

3. Triple flap method-The surgical procedure consists of radical excision of adenomyosis (leaving a 1 cm margin of tissue above the endometrium and a 1 cm margin of tissue below the serosal surface), with subsequent triple-flap reconstruction of the uterus⁵. The enlarged uterus is bisected with a scalpel from the serosal surface of the fundus, in the midline and in the sagittal plane, all the way down through the adenomyosis until the uterine cavity is reached. In this way the entire extent of the adenomyosis is clearly visible, with the crucial landmarks of the endometrium and the serosal surface always in clear view. The endometrial cavity is opened sufficiently to permit the introduction of the index finger to protect and help guide during excision of the adenomyotic tissues. The adenomyotic tissues are grasped with Martin forceps and excised from surrounding myometrium leaving a myometrial thickness, from the serosa above and the endometrium below, of 1 cm. Care is also taken to avoid damage to the Fallopian tubes. Removal of the affected tissues results in an external uterine wall composed of serosa and also 1 cm of myometrium and an inner uterine wall composed of the same thickness of myometrium and normal endometrial lining. The endometrial lining is then approximated with interrupted sutures of 3-0 Vicryl. On one side of the bisected uterus the myometrium and serosa are approximated in the antero-posterior plane with many interrupted sutures of 2-0 Vicryl. Then the contralateral side of the uterine wall (composed also of serosa and myometrium) is brought over the reconstructed first side in such a way as to cover the seromuscular suture line . Suture lines must not overlap; only myometrial tissue flaps overlap. To accomplish this, the serosal surface of the underlying flaps must first be stripped, that is, the myometrium of the underlying flap must be denuded of serosa.

Specimen retrieval

One approach to reducing the pitfall of open power modulation is to place the uterine adenomyoma in a bag, hand morcellate the tissue within the bag, and remove the bag and tissue through an abdominal incision (mini-laparotomy) or a colpotomy.

If transabdominal removal of the adenomyomatous tissue is planned, the surgical port incision typically would need to be enlarged to permit hand morcellation and removal of the tissue.

Morcellation of tissue within a bag would reduce the risk of spreading bits of adenomyotic tissues around the peritoneal cavity. An advance would be to develop power morcellation technology that occurs within a bag, with the removal of the bag and the enclosed morcellated adenomyoma through a laparoscopy port.

Fig 3 Residual adenomyotic tissue being excised

Fig 4 Uterine myometrium after the wedge has been removed

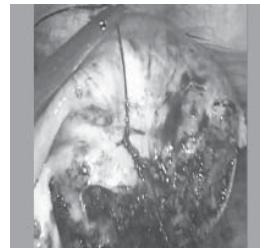

Fig 5 Mattress sutures taken to approximate the edge

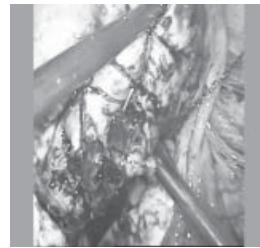

Fig 6 Uterine edges being approximated

Tips and Tricks

Cutting during dissection is performed on the side of the adenomyoma rather than on the uterine side to avoid dessication of the myometrial fibres

Suturing should not be very tight as it may cause necrosis.

Mattress suture can be taken to approximate the edges and ensure haemostasis

Middlesex: A case report

Nilanchali Singh, Shalini Rajaram, Neerja Goel

5α reductase deficiency is an autosomal recessive single gene disorder categorized as 46 XY DSD accounting for less than 5% of cases. A 14 yr old girl presented with primary amenorrhea, recent voice change, hair growth over upper lip and enlargement of external genitalia over past one year. She was phenotypically female with no breast development, absent axillary hair, clitoromegaly and vaginal agenesis. Hormone profile was in male range and karyotype was 46XY. Genetic analysis reported homozygous mutation in exon 5 of SRD5A2 (c.737G>A.Arg246Gln). The girl and parents underwent extensive pediatric, surgical, psychiatric evaluation and counseling and chose female gender assignment. Multidisciplinary approach with open discussion on gender role, identity, surgical interventions and psychiatric problems is necessary before proceeding with treatment.

Editor's comment

Counseling before ART - What an IVF specialist must know: With the use of ART, individuals with 46,XY DSD may be able to have children and hence it is important to know the mode of inheritance to counsel patients. Mutations of SRY, NR5A1 (SF1), and DHH are known to be associated with 46,XY DSD and 46,XY CGD. Duplication of NR0B1 (DAX1) and WNT4 are associated with 46,XY DSD. 46,XY disorder of sex development (DSD) with abnormally developed, dysgenetic gonads and 46,XY complete gonadal dysgenesis (46,XY CGD) with streak gonads can be inherited in an autosomal dominant, autosomal recessive, X-linked, or Y-linked manner depending on the gene involved - Mutations in SRY are inherited in a Y-linked manner, Mutations in NR5A1 are inherited in an autosomal dominant manner, Heterozygous mutations in DHH are inherited in an autosomal dominant manner, Homozygous (or compound heterozygous) mutations in DHH are inherited in an autosomal recessive manner, NR0B1 duplications are inherited in an X-linked manner, WNT4 duplications are inherited in an autosomal dominant manner. A PGD can be recommended for these patients.¹

Protocol for genetic analysis for 46 XY DSD: A routine cytogenetic analysis is performed. If cytogenetic studies are normal, perform FISH or deletion testing to determine if SRY is deleted. If SRY is present, perform sequence analysis for SRY, NR5A1, and DHH. If sequence analysis of SRY, NR5A1, and DHH is normal, test for duplication of NR0B1 and WNT4.¹

A curious case of abdominopelvic mass

Jyotsna Gupta, Amita Suneja, Sandhy Jain, Kiran Guleria, Abha Sharma, N B Vaid

A 32 yrs old P2 L2 was admitted under surgery discipline with history of progressive distension abdomen and weight loss for one year. There was no history of pain abdomen, fever, urinary / bowel complaints, jaundice or any previous surgery. General physical examination was essentially normal. Per abdomen examination revealed doughy feel with no definite lump however multiple firm nodules were palpable. Per vaginum and per rectal examination were normal. Haemogram, liver function tests including viral markers, kidney function tests, tumour markers for germ cell tumours and CA-125 were within normal limits. Ultrasound and CT scan revealed a large unencapsulated solid, heterogeneous soft tissue mass with small cystic changes, areas of necrosis reaching upto inferior hepatic margins which appeared to be arising from peritoneum/ omentum/ mesentery, abutting anterior abdominal wall and partially encasing small bowel loops. It was suggestive of peritoneal mesothelioma or Lymphoma or carcinomatosis. Exploratory laparotomy revealed a large heterogeneous solid cystic mass 20 × 25 cm filling the whole abdomen. tumour had to be chopped to know its origin. it seemed to be arising from the right posterolateral wall of the uterus and was extending retroperitoneally in between the leaves of broad ligaments upto the pelvic floor. Abdominal viscera, para aortic/pelvic lymphnodes and bilateral ovaries were normal. Due to profuse bleeding anterior division of right internal iliac artery was ligated followed by total hysterectomy with complete excision of the tumor with a provisional diagnosis of leiomyosarcoma or degenerated leiomyoma. Frozen section was not feasible therefore ovaries were not removed at that time thinking this might be a benign tumor. Histopathology revealed it to be Extrauterine Adenomyosis with Mature Cystic Teratoma.

This is an extremely rare entity and only 25 cases have been reported so far under various names of extrauterine adenomyosis, extrauterine uterine like masses or endomyometriosis. Commonest site of its occurrence is pelvis and has also been reported in upper abdomen and liver. Because of its rarity, nonspecific clinical signs and radiological picture there was a diagnostic dilemma. This case is different from other reported cases because of its huge size and associated mature cystic teratoma which is the first case in literature.

Paraneoplastic cerebellar degeneration - A rare presentation of ovarian malignancy: Case report

Richa Sharma, Gita Radhakrishnan, AG Radhika, Alpana Singh, Anshuja Singla,

Paraneoplastic neurological syndromes are a heterogeneous group of neurologic disorders caused by non metastatic immune response to a primary malignancy commonly lungs, breast, ovaries and lymphomas. Paraneoplastic cerebellar degeneration is a rare but fatal neuronal syndrome characterized by cerebellar atrophy with a diffuse loss of Purkinje cells, mediated by a cross-reaction of antibodies with tumor antigens and cerebellar tissue. A 65 year old postmenopausal lady referred from neurology with symptoms of cerebellar degeneration (sudden inability to stand or walk, vertigo and slurring of speech since eight months) and a large adnexal mass. Examination revealed ataxic gait, absent plantar, and a pelvic mass corresponding to 26 weeks size gravid uterus. CA-125 and CEA were normal. CT and MRI of brain were consistent with senile atrophic changes and chronic cerebellar demyelination. CSF anti YO antibodies were present. Staging laparotomy with TAH with BSO with infracolic omentectomy was performed. The histology of lesion revealed high grade serous adenocarcinoma of left ovary consistent with FIGO stage I A. The diagnosis of paraneoplastic cerebellar degeneration secondary to ovarian malignancy was confirmed. Postoperatively her slurring of speech and gait improved.

The onset of symptoms of cerebellar degeneration indicates the presence of an occult malignancy. Early recognition of paraneoplastic syndrome facilitates early treatment of malignancy which can prevent progression of symptoms.

Editor's comment

The disease typically precedes the detection of malignancy by a year or more.¹

Less often, PCD occurs in a patient with a known malignancy or heralds the onset of a recurrence. The presence of specific antibodies in serum samples helps to guide identification of the occult underlying malignancy. In patients older than 50 years, acute or subacute cerebellar degeneration is paraneoplastic in origin in 50% of cases and physician should keep it in mind in patients with signs of cerebellar degeneration without an obvious cause.²

RCOG UK Franchise MRCOG Part II Final Preparation

- Written and OSCE Combined Course

9th - 11th July, 2015

Limited to 10 candidates only (First Come First Serve basis)

Overview

This three day course includes lectures on the practice of obstetrics and gynaecology within the NHS, lectures on examination technique and practice examinations. The candidates will have two papers each containing 50 SBAs and 50 EMQs to reflect the new format. They will also do two mock OSCE circuits, once as the candidate and once as an observer. The course syllabus and all practice papers are provided by RCOG UK.

This course is ideally suited to candidates who are "exam ready" in their knowledge, skills and competencies. It is intended to complement your local training programme and therefore focuses purely on exam technique and practice. The seats are limited so that each candidate can practice OSCE experience with individualised feedbacks from the tutors.

Course Fee: Rs 45,000

Venue - RCOG North Zone Academic Centre
B-235, C R Park, New Delhi-110019, INDIA.
